

Make a difference in a veterinary student's future. Hire a student for the whole summer, or consider a one to two-week involvement in a hospital/clinic rotation with one or more colleagues in your area. This would also give the student great exposure to the practice environment in your area.

Why employ a veterinary student this summer?

1. Develop relationships with potential future associates.
2. Provide the student with an invaluable and realistic experience.
3. Take an active part in reducing student debt load.
4. They are eager to learn from you, giving you an enthusiastic employee.

Student Summer Work Program (SSWP) helps second and third-year students gain valuable real-world experience and minimize student debt load. It allows the participating practitioner to directly participate in the educational experience as well as to get to know future associates. Though it may seem a little early to be thinking about next summer, the students need to know about summer employment opportunities prior to committing themselves to externships and summer clinics. SSWP is a collaboration of the Oklahoma Veterinary Medical Association and the veterinary students at Oklahoma State University.

How does the program work?
